Mahone and Wise.

Gen. Mahone in his last fulmination issued in response to Mr. John S. Wise's address to the republicans of the State in opposition to Mahone's methods, says:

"One cannot avoid a feeling of acute sympathy for Capt. Wise in seeing him forced by his conscientions convictions to declare war sgainst a system of party government of which, throughout its whole administration, he has been a principal beneficiary. If this system had antagonized him-had bufiled and sacrificed him-we might see how easily he could turn upon it and endeavor to de-stroy it; but as it is, it is left to our tender maginations to conceive the agonizing threes he must have undergone to have reached the conviction, after eight years of cumulative honors and emoluments, that he nust break with all his former associated and associations and fight against the plan of party organization, against the unit rule, dexpress the stern resolution that these must down at his bidding or he will 'go into ome other party.'

What becomes of Capt. Wise's assertion, that our party has become all officers and no men? Can that assertion stand for a mo-ment before the fact that in six years, under our present plan of organization, our voting strength has increased from $2,000 to 144,000 and when within the last nine years we have received a popular majority in the State at least five if not six times? On the contrary, as 'leaders' have diminished by desertion and eroli, our rank and file have grown. Captain Wise alleges that he has implored me and my friends to abandon the unit rule, but the last and only conversation he and I ever had on the surject was some time in January last when he casually suggested to me that it would relieve him of some embarrassment if the unit rule were not adopt ed this year with respect to our national delegation. He confessed that the argu ment for the rule might be better than the argument sgainst it but as he had committed himself against it in 1884, he did not want to go back on his record. That record as he now states it is, that he would not go Chicago, although chosen a delegate-at rge, because he objected to being "gagged" by the rule—confessing that he wanted to go to Chicago free to vote against Arthur and the overwhelming will of the republicans of Virginia, free to do as he willed incomplying the party willed Sp. gueb for the republicant of the republicant of the republicant of the republicant of Virginia, free to do as he willed incomplying the republicant of the rep persons as "unfortunate." If I had sent it to the Richmond Dispatch, instead of seeking to keep our party affairs to ourselves, it would have been all right, if not fortunate Yet in writing and circulating that letter, priginally written in answer to inquiries from many correspondents) I carefully abstained from doing so in my official capacity and enercised only my undoubted right as a private citizen and republican to express my plaion and preference, and give my reasons therefor. I have nothing to regret even in the publication of that letter, a+it reached the press, not only without m. consent, but by a dishonorable disregard of my cosfidence any and injunction. No rational human being can read that I tter without being fully convinced that, if its allegations of fact he true, t points out the only manly course—be onpublicans to pureue; and I undertake to prove before any tribunal, or umpire, that all these allegations are true, even including but which charges the authorship of a certain letter which appeared in the New York Tribune to the inspiration of a Presidential Aspirant and to the pen of one of his hench-men. But it happens that the very first copy of this 'unfortunate' circular was handed to Capt. Wise by me in person, with the reisform me what he thought of it. That was two munths previous to Capt. Wise's prociamation in the Dispatch, and in that prociamation I have the first intimation of his News what he had been asked two months before to give his opinion and advice upon!

i might still further demonstrate the inaccuracy, inconsequence and futility of Capt.
Wise's protunciamento; but it was only necessity to prick its glittering bubbles; and this
I have done Even this would have been unnecessary, had not Capt. Wise so long enloyed a prominence in the party which lends his inconsiderate statements and sounding purases a fictitious character that may im pose on the thoughtless."
